

GROWTHER

Residential Roofing
Energy Services

SIX THINGS TO ASK YOUR ROOFING CONTRACTOR

When it comes to choosing a residential roofing contractor, it's important to select an experienced contractor who can give your roof the quality it needs to keep your family and personal belongings safe from the outside elements. When choosing a roofing contractor for your home, you must seek out candidates with the proper licensing and a great business reputation in your area. Continue reading to learn how you can choose a residential roofing contractor for your home.

1

Verify that the roofing contractor you hire has the required applicable business licenses for your state or local area.

- The Construction Industry Licensing Board (CILB) is part of the Department of Business and Professional Regulation in the state of Florida.
- Florida state law mandates that your roofing contractor have an active roofing contractor's license current along with completion of bi-annual continuing education requirements.

2

Verify that the roofing contractor or business is legitimate by asking for their tax identification number, a business address, business website or email address, and contact phone number.

MORE THINGS TO ASK ON BACK

3

Ask the roofing contractor to provide you with proof of insurance, including worker's compensation and liability coverage.

- The state of Florida requires contractors to carry specified minimum thresholds of insurance coverages. Make sure to check that your contractor has the general liability and workers compensation insurances required. You may also want to verify with your own insurance agent that those levels are sufficient for your home.
- Crowthers far exceeds the mandated minimum insurance thresholds.

4

Ask the roofing contractor for a list of references and past clients you can call to find out if they were satisfied with the work done on their roof.

- Crowthers can provide a list of references for all types of jobs.

5

Ask your roofing contractor for proof that shows they have been approved by the roofing manufacturer to install or work on the roof you have chosen.

- Some types of roofing may require contractors to have special training, certifications, or licenses to ensure proper installation.

6

Ask the roofing contractor how many people will be working on the roofing project for your home so you can determine how the work will be supervised and how long it will take to complete.

For even more questions to ask your roofing contractor or to discuss your roofing needs, please call 239.337.0026

Crowther Roofing & Sheet Metal of Florida, Inc. • 2543 Rockfill Road • Fort Meyers, Florida